III. Project Details

Project Description

The MPQM-MF program is a customized graduate program with 39 academic units. A major part of the program's curriculum is the Action Plan and Project (APP) which is equivalent to a thesis paper. The APP is a 6-unit major course that combines academic research with program development and implementation. A student needs to pass this course in order to acquire eligibility of being awarded a Master's degree. Students would need to undergo these three (3) essential components of the APP course: Topic-to-Title Defense, Proposal Defense and Final Defense. Should a student not be endorsed for defense or receive a disapproved decision from the defense panel, the student would be given another chance to be endorsed for defense or be approved by the defense panel.

One student, Mr. Jason A. Ariola, was not endorsed for defense by his faculty adviser (FA) resulting to his inability to pass the course. Hence, this remedial class was opened to give Mr. Ariola a chance to refine his APP proposal and have it ready for the proposal and final defense. The program allowed Mr. Ariola to catch-up and still earn his master's degree along with his batchmates belonging to the MPQM-MF Batch 5 program.

Project Objectives

At the end of the course, the student will be able to:

1. Describe the purpose, concepts, and principles of research.
2. Explain the research process.
3. Develop literature process review model and analyze published research.
4. Characterize qualitative, quantitative and mixed methods approaches in research.
5. Apply learning as a microfinance/microinsurance expert, policy implementer, and/or program specialist in the preparation of the research proposal and final APP paper.
